

MEET KAY SLAMA

I grew up on a family farm in NE North Dakota, and I attended undergraduate college at the University of North Dakota, graduate school in clinical psychology at the University of Iowa, internship at a UCLA-affiliated hospital, and received a masters in administration at the University of South Dakota. After a career mostly in clinical practice and administration, I retired from an adjunct position with the Dept of Psychiatry at the UM Med School in the Twin Cities, as well as from teaching the rural practice course with the doctoral counseling program at St. Mary's University.

I volunteer for climate and other environmental issues because so much is at stake: Our water, land, soil, health, and the future of our children and the Earth. I am proud to be Action Chair at LWV UMRR. I have been a part of MN (North Star Chapter) Sierra Club Legislative Committee from 2013-present, Outings Leader 2011-present, and carried the national Sierra Club's declarations for suits concerning the Clean Water Act and Renewable Fuel Standard. I have been Volunteer of the Year. I have also been my church's Church Social Justice Chair from 2006-present, where I am now co-chair and focused on environment and environmental justice. For fun, I play tennis and pickleball, run, canoe, bike; read; play a couple musical instruments; garden; and spend several months/year in outdoor travel, birding, and photography.
